

NGONG ROAD SDA CHURCH

Sabbath School Secretary's Report — Sabbath,

™East Africa Time Oct, 03 2026

call to wind up will keep coming.

Closing

The closing song, SDA 388, was led by the now fully assembled chorister team, closing out a morning that had opened thin and finished full.

The Sabbath School offering for the day came to Ksh 370, going toward the department's continued mission and outreach work.

Sabbath School officially ended at 10:30 a.m.

Respectfully submitted,

NGONG ROAD SDA CHURCH

Sabbath School Secretary's Report — Sabbath,

™East Africa Time Oct, 03 2026

How the Morning Opened

Last Sabbath carried the particular weight of an end-of-quarter Sabbath, and for once the church's service team matched the occasion with its own punctuality: the deacons and deaconesses were on duty well ahead of time, seeing to the hall and the ushering long before the congregation itself began trickling in. Whether their early diligence rubbed off on the rest of the members remains, as always, a matter of ongoing study. The congregation itself filled in at its usual unhurried pace, building from a handful of early arrivals into a respectably full house by the time lesson discussion got underway — a fitting turnout for a Sabbath that closed out the quarter.

The Officiating Team

Elder Newton opened proceedings with prayer, setting a reflective tone befitting the close of the quarter. The opening song was led by Chorister Cindy and the rest of the music team, who brought the congregation into worship before the morning's business got underway. Kevin Orang'o handled the introduction, welcoming members into what was, fittingly, a Sabbath of review and closing out rather than simply another week's lesson.

The previous Sabbath's report, along with the Sabbath School mission story, were both read by the Secretary, Edison Ochieng, after which Kevin Orang'o led the dispersion of the congregation into their respective classes for the quarter's final lesson discussion.

Lesson Discussion

As is customary on an end-of-quarter Sabbath, classes used the morning to wrap up the quarter's lessons, with discussion carrying the familiar steady build in numbers as members filtered in through the hour. No formal headcount was taken this particular week, but by all accounts the classes were well attended, carrying the energy expected of a quarter drawing to its close.

Closing

The session closed in the usual order, with the officiating team returning to the pulpit to wrap up the morning's proceedings and send the congregation into the rest of the Sabbath on a reflective note, the quarter now formally behind them.

The Sabbath School offering for the day went, as always, toward the department's continued mission and outreach work.
